Theme of the National Seminar

The seminar brings together researchers, educators, industries, agricultural producers and exporters, and agricultural entrepreneurs to discuss the issues, perspectives, dimensions, challenges, and opportunities for transforming agriculture to feed the world's ever-increasing population in a sustainable and profitable manner. Traditional agricultural practices have been disrupted by technological innovation in recent years. This National Seminar aims to explore various issues related to contemporary agricultural problems in India and abroad, and how government policies have contributed to the development of rural India. The presenters are expected to discuss, among other things, how new technologies can help increase yields/productivity and profits while having a small and positive impact on the environment; how digital platforms enable information to flow in real time, how to build sustainable supply chains, and other emerging issues. Through this national seminar, CIMP offers a forum for the lively discussion of innovations, sustainability, technology, and financial investments in agriculture.

About ICFA

The Indian Chamber of Food and Agriculture (ICFA) plays a critical role as a policy think tank, trade facilitation body, and development enterprise for the food and agriculture sector in India. As the world becomes more globalized, newer challenges continue to emerge that require proactive solutions to help India's food and agriculture sector grow and compete globally. ICFA is dedicated to creating opportunities for growth, value addition, and trade, while improving the income of farmers through its outreach policy, business agenda, and global partnerships. The council's state and district chapters, national councils, sector-focused working groups, and country-specific joint business councils all work together to represent the interests of all stakeholders at the national level and to position India's food and agriculture sector globally.

ICFA is also driving investments, entrepreneurship, and technology in the farm sector through global partnerships with the right institutions and by taking up projects, training, and facilitating farmers' producer organizations and agri start-up ventures to accelerate growth in farmers' incomes, productivity, and agribusinesses. With increased interest among major countries in the world to engage with India and explore opportunities for investments, trade, and cooperation, ICFA has become the dedicated body to facilitate such engagements through Joint Business Councils with various countries while promoting agri-produce from Indian states and guiding them on investments, marketing, and policy issues.
